About Dr. El

Dr. El Brown, fondly referred to as Dr. El, is a distinguished author, professor, thought leader, and proud Head Start alumna with a rich and diverse career. Beginning by teaching young children in the United States, Japan, and South Korea, she transitioned into the pivotal role of a stay-at-home mom. In response to her then toddler son's unique needs, Dr. El founded KinderJam, which burgeoned into a global initiative, reaching families in 11 countries and 16 states.

Her unwavering commitment to the well-being of women, families, and children earned her invitations to the White House, appearances on The Oprah Winfrey Show and the Dr. Oz Show, and the esteemed title of the 2012 Army Spouse of the Year.

Furthering her expertise, Dr. El earned a Ph.D. in Early Childhood Education/Early Childhood Special Education, specializing in Educational Psychology. Her ground-breaking research focuses on reconceptualizing support systems for mothers, particularly those mothering children with disabilities.

Currently, KinderJam, under Dr. El's guidance, operates a preschool and summer camp programs for Fairfax County. Dr. El passionately dedicates her time to traveling and engaging with service providers and families, imparting knowledge, skills, and strategies to better support and engage with young children, families, and each other.

Above all, Dr. El's most cherished role is being the mother of her amazing son on the autism spectrum, affectionately known as SuperDuperYoungMan (SDYM).
